Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

ON the 159th anniversary of our independence we find America a vastly changed nation. The frontier need of physical courage and strenuous action has given way to the need for moral courage and mental equilibrium. The energy of youth is less important now than the caution of middle-age, as our country approaches the second full century mark.

Building Revival Is Needed to Spur Business Recovery

The most characteristic virtue of the America of the past was her love for direct action—a recklessness as to consequences providing she carried the point immediately at hand.

Flynn Sees Little Hope for an Uplift in Trade Before Fall

It is not unusual, for instance, to hear one of these lovers of direct action right here in Hope say that if America could drum up a war between two other nations it would help trade and drive away the panic.

LOANS TO INCREASE

Bankers Expect Expansion of Credit to Set in This Autumn

In two illuminating articles, John T. Flynn has shown what has been happening to business in the first six months of 1935 and has described the major forces and events that have been responsible for those happenings. Now, in the third and last article of this vital series written for NEA Service, Flynn permits himself—and you—a glimpse into the immediate business future.

NEW YORK.—Standing at this half-way house of the year—what can we see ahead for business?

In appraising the past we find business trends strongly influenced by the performances of the capital goods industries, foreign trade and government spending.

Foreign trade we may eliminate as a factor in shaping our own economic life in the immediate future. This leaves public spending and private heavy goods production to be included. There is no force apparent now which would justify us in supposing that business would be more brisk for the balance of the summer than it has been. There is just one possibility. That is that many building plans projected last winter and a little slow in getting under way may now be pushed with energy. But there are not enough such plans to give us much hope in that direction. However, a summer recession would be a more or less natural thing. There is, however, every reason to believe that business will resume its activity with the coming of fall. The chief reason for this can be found in the government's plan.

Bankers Expect Borrowing to Gain

A great deal of reliance is placed by many business men on the mounting reserves in the banks. Bankers have now vast funds to lend them. Some bankers think the jam cannot go on forever and that presently borrowings will begin to turn up. If this happens

State's Revenue Up 1 1/4 Millions

Gasoline, Tobacco Taxes Gain—Liquor Tax Is Disappointing

LITTLE ROCK.—The State Revenue Department collected $13,266,228.30 from all sources during the fiscal year of 1934-1935 ending Sunday, an increase of $1,247,824.85 over the previous year's collections. It was said in an annual statement prepared by Commissioner Earl R. Wiseman.

The greatest tax collections, which showed a gain of $664,056.12; the cigar and cigarette tax, a gain of $108,994.58; toll bridge fees, a gain of $100,440.09; and the income tax, a gain of $135,549.40.

Yield from the liquor gallonage tax was considerably below the estimates of sponsors of the Thorne bill. Collections for the three months the tax was in effect totaled only $139,322.54. At that rate the annual revenue from the tax would be less than $600,000, as compared with estimated revenue of $1,500,000. Liquor permits yielded revenue of $190,700 for the quarter-year.

Comparison of collections of auto and truck license fees with the previous year showed a decrease, but Commissioner Wiseman said that the figures do not represent a true comparison. The figure for 1933-34 included $108,893.31 collected by sheriffs which should have been paid into the state treasury before July 1, 1933, but actually were not collected until after that date.

If the delayed collections were deducted from the total for the 1933-34 fiscal year, this year's collections would show a gain of $50,042.01, he pointed out.

Sales Tax Repeal Available in 1936

Earliest That an Initiated Act Could Be Voted on, Says Bailey

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)—Attorney General Carl E. Bailey ruled Tuesday that an act could be initiated by the people to repeal the sales tax, but that such a measure could be voted on only at the next general election in November of 1936.

The time for submitting a referendum petition expired on June 13, 1935, 90 days after adjournment of the 50th general assembly, and it would now be impossible to have the sales tax submitted to a vote of the people under the referendum provisions of the state law, Bailey held.

Auto Replaces Firecracker as Death's Chief Agent on "4th"

To celebrate its independence, America has paid far more than the cost of winning it. Automobile accidents, drownings and fireworks casualties during past Fourth of July celebrations have cost America more lives than the Revolutionary War, in which 4044 Americans died.

Rodeo Expected to Draw 7,000; Ellington Dance Site Changed

First Performance at 8 p. m. Wednesday, Again 2 p. m. Thursday

A spokesman for the Hope Fire Department said Wednesday that a crowd of approximately 7,000 persons were expected to attend the two performances of the second annual rodeo to be held Wednesday night and Thursday afternoon.

The first performance starts at 8 p. m. Wednesday at Hope High School stadium. Gates will open at 7 o'clock to allow spectators to enter the field. A six-foot enclosure has been placed around the arena for safety of the crowd.

The performance will last about 2 1/2 hours. Approximately 100 dead of stock will be used. Twenty-five riders and ropers will perform. A broadcast system has been installed with loudspeakers on either side of the field.

Frank Reeder of Arkadelphia, with 15 years of rodeo experience, will be in charge. Several riders and ropers seen here last year in the first rodeo, will perform.

They include Harry Butler, of Burbank, Cal., and his son Buddy, eight years old. Butler will do fancy and trick roping. Ray Owens of Arkadelphia, will attempt to bulldoze a steer by leaping from a racing automobile.

Shiver Hart, negro of Idabel, Okla., will ride the wild buffalo. Clyde Crowshaw of Idabel, will milk wild cows. Practically the same performance Wednesday night will be repeated at 2 p. m. Thursday.

The 40-piece Camden band, augmented by the Hope band, will furnish music at both shows.

The free barbecue will be held from 11 to 2 o'clock Thursday. At that time a greased pig will be turned loose. The person catching the pig will be the winner.

All rules governing the rodeo will be announced at the grounds. Stock to be used includes nine Brahman steers, seven wild horses, wild cows, steers, calves and goats.

AAA Act Attacked by Cereal Firms

Four of Largest Challenge Validity of Farm Benefit Measure

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Constitutionality of the Agricultural Adjustment Act and the right of the government to collect $109,876 due in processing taxes was challenged in a federal court action by four large cereal companies Tuesday.

Federal Judge Henry W. Goldford granted a temporary order restraining the district collector of internal revenue from collecting the taxes, due July 1, and set Tuesday for arguments on continuing the injunction until settlement of the suits.

The plaintiffs are the Standard Milling Company of New York city, the Dunlop Milling Company of New York and Clarksville, Tenn., the Postum Company of New York and Battle Creek, Mich., and Iglehart Brothers, Inc., of New York, Evansville and Vincennes, Ind.

Package Sale of Liquor Authorized by Hope's Council

Curb Service for Beer Outlawed by New Municipal Ordinance

BAKER JOINS FORCE

Resolution for Late Plant Manager Geo. Sandefur Adopted by Aldermen

The city council Tuesday night repealed a section of ordinance number 488 clearing the way for druggists of Hope to handle licensed whisky.

The original ordinance said that minors were prohibited from entering stores where liquor was sold.

Due to nature of the business conducted by druggists, the council found that it was necessary for minors to enter drug stores.

After discussion the council voted to repeal that section of the ordinance, lifting the barrier against druggists.

No Curb Service

The council passed a second ordinance which prohibits sale of beer at street curbs. Part of the ordinance reads:

"It is unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to sell or deliver beer to the curb in front of their place of business, or sell or deliver beer at any place other than within their place of business."

"And it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation selling beer in Hope to maintain booths, screened partitions, private alcoves or lockers where beer can be served or anything of any character which obstructs the view of persons passing in front of such place of business."

These partitions have a tendency to encourage and increase drunkenness, the ordinance further stated.

A motion was carried Tuesday night restoring Clarence E. Baker as a member of the Hope police force. Mr. Baker will be on the night force.

Alderman Keith reported to the council that another man was needed on the force. Sid Bundy was present with a petition signed by 176 business

The postoffice will remain closed throughout the day. No rural route service or deliveries in the city will be made. Mail, however, will be placed in postoffice boxes at the office, carrying out the usual Sunday schedule.

All liquor stores will remain closed under the provision of the Thorne liquor act which prohibits packages sales on national holidays, Sundays or election days.

Banks will observe the holiday as will other business houses except drug stores, restaurants and confectionaries.

Markets

Cotton

NEW ORLEANS.—(AP)—Profit taking on light pre-holiday liquidation unsettled the cotton market at the start of trading Wednesday and active months were three to five points lower at the first call.

July at 11.92, October 11.59, December 11.47, May 11.66 all shared in the decline and lost minor amounts.

At the July positions approximately 12 cents a pound the belief is current that the government cotton pool will sell actual cotton without replacing it with futures.

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened barely steady, three to six lower on disappointing Liverpool cables and favorable weather. July 11.98, October 11.63, December 11.64, January 11.63, March 11.67, May 11.69.

Market to Close

NEW YORK.—(AP)—All leading security and commodity markets in the United States will be closed Thursday in observance of Independence Day.

Back of a Backache May Be Bad Disease.

Persons who suffer from backache usually are interested primarily in one thing, and that is to get rid of the pain and trouble as soon as possible.

But that doesn't cure the difficulty, because backache is not a disease. It's only a symptom. What the doctor is interested in is not so much the backache as what might have caused it.

A backache often may be due to a simple strain of the tissues, or an actual infection of the bones of the spine. There are backaches associated with moving, lifting, or with infection of the kidneys, but far more people think their backaches are due to their kidneys than actually is the case.

In women a disturbance of the organs associated with childbirth frequently is responsible for backache, and there are cases in which piles, gallstones, or constipation may be the primary factor leading to regular pains in the back.

Yet there are instances in which it can be established that no physical disturbance actually exists, but that the whole thing is mental.

Since there are so many conditions possibly associated with pain in the back, it is necessary for the physician confronted with a case of this type to make a most extensive and careful examination.

Such examination must be made with the clothes of the patient removed, because it is necessary to study most carefully the structure of the body from head to foot and in every possible position. That is to say, the patient must be studied standing, sitting, bending over, lying face down, lying down on the back, lying on the side and, in fact, in almost any position which the body may assume during day or night.

The doctor must examine not only the bones of the spine, but the muscles involved in its movement and the nerves associated with sensations of pain.

He must also know from a careful study of the history of the patient the time when the pain first appeared, whether the pain is associated in any way with a bruise or a strain, whether it came on gradually, and also the conditions under which the pain appears and disappears.

It must be remembered that the spine consists of a series of joints and that, at its sides and ends, it is associated with other bones and joints. For instance, the ribs are each joined to the spine at the back and many of them to the breastbone at the front.

Any loosening or strain on these joints may result in a painful area. Such strains are rather rare, but they do occur, particularly in connection with automobile accidents.

The Man Injustice Could Not Defeat—"Deep Dark River" Is Moving Tale of Southern Negro

Relations of the colored race in the deep south with the ruling class provide a rich and tragic field for the creative artist to exploit, and the growing tendency of southern authors to deal with the subject realistically seems to indicate that that much talked-of "southern renaissance" in literature is well under way.

The latest author to delve into this field is Robert Rylee, and his new novel—"Deep Dark River"—is an exceptionally good one.

He tells about a Mississippi colored man who, being devout and reverent, wants to be a preacher—and manages, through no fault of his own, to get involved in a murder case and get sent to prison.

Unrooted by the depression and dropped on a cotton plantation, this man incurs the wrath of the overseer, who arranges with a local negro bad man to pick a fight with him and kill him. The bad man picks the fight, but proves a poor shot and is himself slain by his intended victim.

Then, still out for revenge, the over-seer gets the victim framed in court and imprisoned for murder.

So the story becomes another dis-

YOUR CHILDREN

Jittery Mothers Needlessly Criticize Children for Their Behavior in Presence of Guests

"Dickie, stop that humming. What will Mrs. Jones think of you?"

The little boy looked at his mother, astonished, as much as to say, "Well, that's the first time I ever heard that."

Mrs. Jones proceeded to tell about her bronchitis, but she had just reached the first cough when her hostess whispered harshly, "Dickie, stop kicking that cushion. Sit down and behave yourself. My, but you're naughty today."

Again he pondered. "My goodness, I've kicked that old porch cushion a hundred times. What's got into Mom?"

Mrs. Jones was just warming up to her subject when Dickie was ordered away from the steps. They were exactly the same old front steps they'd been that morning when his mother had said, "Go and play out in the yard. I'm busy," but now suddenly they must be made of gold or something that a fellow wasn't allowed even to look at them.

Dickie Wasn't Annoying

However he sat down and tried to listen while Mrs. Jones got into the bronchial tubes at last. She had an idea that Mrs. Smith had hadn't half heard it, so she repeated.

The guest was not paying the slightest attention to Dickie. He might as well not have been there, but his mother annoyed her exceedingly. Well, anyway she would try to make that part where the doctor shook his head impressive enough so Mrs. Smith would forget her child.

She jumped into the denouement at last. The doctor was listening with his stethoscope when suddenly Mrs. Smith sprang up. "Dickie, don't touch Daddy's pipe. Keep away from that table."

"Oh, I was only looking. Besides, I often get Daddy's pipe. What's the matter with the old pipe? I was just looking at it."

"Oh, yes, Mrs. Jones. Really I was listening. And was it you appendicitis after all? My, what a time you've had. But aren't you glad you didn't have an operation? Or did you say you'd had it? You see Dickie has been so naughty I couldn't quite hear it all. He is usually so good, but I don't know what's gotten into him today."

Reproofs Were Artificial

Mrs. Jones rose. That's all right, my dear. I merely said that the dentist found it was the wisdom tooth at all, and the liver wasn't in the least affected. Do come to me soon—and bring darling Dickie along."

"I think," said she to herself, as she went down the street, "there should be a school for nervous mothers. I never noticed the boy. It was his mother who was too fidgety to listen."

This was a world of truth in it. Parents are so sure their children will annoy other people by the most ordinary conduct that they lose poise and control themselves. At any rate, it is never successful to begin training only when others are present.

Dickie had behaved very well according to his tenets. His mother was confused and made up reproofs for no reason at all. There is the other extreme, of course, when parents pay no attention to real annoyances in the presence of company, but this other side is not only true but quite common indeed.

Trouble Both Ways

An Australian barrister tells of a black fellow charged in a country town with stealing. His solicitor decided to put him in the box to give evidence on his own behalf. The magistrate, being doubtful if he understood the nature of an oath, undertook to examine him on the point.

"Jacky," he said, "you know what will happen to you if you tell a lie?"

"My oath, boss," replied Jacky, "me go down below—burn long time."

"Quite right," replied the magistrate. "And do you know what will happen if you tell the truth?"

"Yes, boss. We lose 'em case,"—Sydney Herald.

CHAPTER XLVIII

KATHARINE and Michael did not go to England at once, after all. When she was well enough Michael took Katharine back to Silencia where Miss Daisy and Miss Roxana and Miss Vincent and wheezy Mrs. Broughton fussed over her. She was still decidedly the invalid. The doctor made her stay in bed part of every day and Michael, who had another cell-like room across the hall, would carry her out into the heartening sunshine.

He was still unable quite to believe that this delicate, golden-haired girl was really his wife. He had nearly lost her—and all along the way their path had been tangled with briars. It was difficult to believe that everything could be straightened out at last.

One day about a week after their return to Silencia Michael had been out riding on one of the fine Arab horses the Millards had left. He came into his room, almost blinded by the glare of the patio, and found the interior dark and cool. But after his vision had cleared a trifle he saw Katharine sitting in his one deep chair. Katharine, dressed in a green linen frock with delicate hand-work on it. She looked older, more poised and mature.

"Darling! You're really feeling better?"

He raised his hand to her lips. He felt, reverentially, that he was literally unworthy of her. Here he stood, strong and crude in his riding tights, reeking of horses and the out-of-doors, and here was this girl, a very fairy princess of elegance and fragrance, condescending to him . . .

Some of this he said, haltingly and slowly. When he looked up to his amazement he saw she was laughing at him.

WAS it true then—this thing he had long suspected—that the girl had regarded her impulsive bargain with him, that she was certain she did not love him? His heart stood still.

"Michael, you great fool!" Her melodious voice pronounced the words lingeringly.

"Don't you love me any more?"

"You know I do!" he stammered. His eyes devoured her.

"Well then, why don't you take me in your arms? You behave as though I were made of glass. I'm your wife . . ."

"I thought you were ill," he began. But she was in his arms that very moment; she was laughing, half-crying against his stalwart shoulder.

"It's a great scandal, really, when a girl has to woo her man in this shameless fashion."

Michael stopped her mockery in the only possible way—with a kiss.

They sat side by side at the long dark dinner table that night, and held hands shamelessly, after the fashion of lovers. Afterward they walked in the moonlight for a little. Michael, coming to find her later, discovered her at her window, dreaming against the casement.

"Did you ever see anything so lovely?" The garbled tree in the courtyard made a stark shadow on the flags. There was an indefinable scent in the room.

"What sort of perfume is that?" He crushed her to him, this creature of light and air and a describable sweetness.

"I—I can't remember," she said vaguely.

"It's very nice," he told her in eloquently. Her fair hair was loosened about her face; her breast rose and fell under its covering of blond lace.

There was silence after that long murmuring interval. The stars shone down on the desert and the soft southern air moved the curtains gently to and fro. And Katharine slept like a child soundlessly and blissfully against her lover's shoulder . . .

THREE weeks later they were in London, to all eyes the usual good-looking young American couple in well cut tweeds; the girl with a fat pigskin bag slung under her arm; the man tall and possessive in a pleasant way, shouldering his way through crowds and holding her close, gently when they crossed the crowded thoroughfares. Mr. Brown had been surprised to find that the new Lord Carden had a wife, and such a pretty one, he told his wife at tea that evening.

"She doesn't talk like an American," he said. "That is, I can understand every single word she says." Mr. Brown had glanced most of his impressions of the Americans from the cinema.

Katharine said he was an old lamb, and Michael agreed more warmly. After a brief stay at the Savoy the two were to go to Ireland to see the castle which had come to Michael from his father's people.

"It probably has 57 rooms and one bath," he told his bride. "And old retainers in hunting coats jumping out of the hedges."

"Oh, Michael, we must go some riding there. They say the horses are marvelous!"

He smiled at her glowing face. "Perhaps you'd want to stay—don't go back to the states at all."

"I don't know. Wherever you are," said Katharine, "I'll be home to me."

They came in to their suite one day at tea time. The girl, looking her best of dark rich silks, sniffed the mail on the table.

Her face altered. Michael, who knew every expression of it, watched her anxiously.

"A letter from John Kaye," he said. "Oh, darling, I am very ardent dreamily. We take the boat . . . and I let him down, darling."

She tore it open. She had not seen John when he was through New York. He had not known what to say to him.

"Dear Kitty," she read. "Best of luck and all that. Tell Michael I'll be there for me that he'll be."

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Beauty's In the Swim.

Swimming is the one summer sport that exercises every muscle in your body. To swim vigorously and steadily for a full hour each day of your vacation will make you lose weight, of course. But the important and certainly the most encouraging thing about this fun-to-do exercise is that it equalizes your weight, even when you do it in more leisurely fashion.

If you never have learned to swim, this is a fine time to begin. Doing the strokes correctly will flatten your stomach, make your thighs and arms slim and improve your posture. Furthermore, by kicking correctly and forcing your arms upward and over in perfect crawl-stroke form, you probably will learn to swim before you know it.

Placing your hands on the edge of the pool or raft or putting them against the side of a life preserver, stretch out flat, relaxing your legs from knees to ankles. Pump the upper part of your legs up and down, letting your feet make rapid hard kicks that create quite a splash. Keep on pumping until your legs are tired and your feet no longer make splashes.

When you have mastered this technique, you should be able to stretch arms forward and, without moving them at all, make your legs propel you back and forth across the pool. If not, you aren't kicking correctly or else you are holding your hand and neck too far upward from the surface of the water.

Remember that your body should be straight, your legs should do as much work as your arms, and your chin ought to be submerged. If you can't learn by yourself, it's worth while to spend some of your vacation money on professional instructions. Naturally, once you have learned, you'll have a good deal more fun and, in addition, a figure that shows no humps and bumps in the wrong places.

NEXT: Califures to go with new hats.

July 4th, 1935

When Freedom from her mountain height,
Unfurled her standard to the air,
She tore the azure robe of night,
And set the stars of glory there;
She mingled with her gorgeous dyes
The milky baldrick of the skies,
And striped its pure celestial white
With streakings of the morning light;
Then, from his mansion in the sun,
She called her eagle-bearer down,
And gave into his mighty hand
The symbol of her chosen land.
Flag of the free heart's hope and
By angel-hands to valor given,
Thy stars have lit the welkin dome,
And all thy hues were born in heaven.
Forever flout that Standard sheet!
Where breathes the foe that falls before us,
With Freedom's soil beneath our feet,
And Freedom's banner streaming o'er us!

widespread pleas for a more sensible method of celebration began to take effect, the slaughter went on.

The terrible price America paid for its patriotic hysteria in those days was strikingly shown by Mrs. Isaac L. Rice, president of the Society for the Suppression of Unnecessary Noise, comparing July 4 casualties with the important battles of the American Revolution. Here they are:

	Killed	Wounded
Lexington	83	37
Bunker Hill	449	37
Fort Moultrie	100	149
White Plains	149	229
Fort Washington	229	72
Monmouth	72
Cowpens
Total	1,119
	Killed	Wounded
July 4, 1903	1,119	1,449
July 4, 1904	1,449	1,119
July 4, 1905	1,119	1,449
July 4, 1906	1,449	1,119
July 4, 1907	1,119	1,449
July 4, 1908	1,449	1,119
July 4, 1909	1,119	1,449
Total	34,603

Of these 34,603 Independence Day victims, 1531 were killed, 901 of them dying from tetanus (lockjaw). Of the remainder, 115 people were completely blinded; 518 lost one eye; 406 lost legs, arms, or hands; 1420 lost one or more fingers; and 30,606 suffered miscellaneous injuries.

Almost as effective as the "Same Fourth" campaign in reducing the fireworks toll was the development of tetanus anti-toxin. Note from above statistics that lockjaw, caused by germs entering wounds created by burns or gun wadding, was responsible for most of the deaths.

Approximately 8 of 10 victims died from this ailment, rivaled only by hydrophobia in its agony and horrible aspect.

Fireworks Toll Falls
In 1910, the tide began to turn, and the fireworks peril went into a decline, hastened by the force of combined public opinion. These mortality statistics, covering the years 1910 to 1917, when complication ceased, tell the story:

Year	Fireworks Fatalities
1910	131
1911	27
1912	41
1913	32
1914	40
1915	30
1916	30
1917	5

All this time the automobile had been making its insidious advance as a major death-dealer. In 1911, the annual auto toll hovered about the 3000 mark.

Exact Independence Day automobile casualty statistics for that period are unavailable, but on a basis of 3000 deaths for the year, one Old-Fashioned Fourth alone could hardly account for more than a score of auto victims.

This, in an age when fireworks were claiming nearly 200 human sacrifices a year, explains why the automobile as a menace to life escaped notice at that time.

Auto Death List Soars
Since 1913, however, deaths from automobile accidents have increased rapidly, leaping from approximately 4300 to 36,000 in 1934. Just since 1928, for in-

"Keeper of Bees" at the Saenger

Gene Stratton-Porter's Story on Local Screen Thursday, Friday

Gene Stratton-Porter's famous novel, "Keeper of the Bees," comes Thursday and Friday to the Saenger with the 4th of July matinee at 2:30 p. m., with Neil Hamilton and Betty Furness in the featured roles. Laid against the colorful background of a seacoast California community, the new Monogram film is a faithful transcription of the Porter novel, and was adapted from the novel which has sold more than 1,500,000 copies since its initial publication and is estimated to have been read by nearly 20 million people. Mrs. Porter is probably the most famous of American novelists, and has more best-sellers to her credit than any other American writer.

The current presentation marks the second time that this gripping novel has been brought to the screen. The silent version, produced many years ago, was one of the pictures which lifted Clara Bow to stardom. All of the flavor of the Porter original has been preserved and the Monogram production officials had the assistance, throughout the making of the picture, of Mrs. Jeannette Porter Meahan, only daughter of the famous novelist.

Playing the difficult role of James MacFarlane, the young veteran, who finds health and happiness in the seaside community, is Neil Hamilton, while appearing opposite him in the leading romantic role is pretty Betty Furness.

opposing and refusing to have anything to do with the collection of the Hall sales tax.

The committee composed of six, was appointed by the president of the bureau and chairman of the meeting to contact business men in adjoining towns, not present at the meeting, in an effort to secure co-operation in a movement to defeat or prevent the collection of this tax.

Reduction Asked
LITTLE ROCK.—Merchants and citizens at Fort Smith are contending that the "Texarkana" exemption clause in the state sales tax law applies to Fort Smith and that only a one per cent tax is collectible there, the same as the Oklahoma sales tax, it developed Tuesday when Revenue Commissioner Earl R. Wiseman requested Attorney General Carl E. Bailey to rule on the question.

The border town exemption section of the act provides that "where there are adjoining cities or incorporated towns which are separated by a state line, the taxes and license to be paid by dealers in and on sales and services in such adjoining city or incorporated towns on the Arkansas side of the state line shall be at the same rate as provided by law in such adjoining state if any, not to exceed the rate provided in this act."

Plan Federal Appeal
WEST MEMPHIS, Ark.—(AP)—Approximately 800 east Arkansas merchants Tuesday night were pledged to refuse payment and collection of the two per cent sales tax.

At a meeting here the tax was denounced by merchants and politicians. The anti-sales tax advocates launched what is intended to be a state-wide drive to abolish the tax.

The First District Anti-Sales Tax League was organized, with its first objective a further test of the constitutionality of the sales tax act. The validity of the measure has been upheld by the Arkansas Supreme Court. An appeal to the United States Supreme Court is planned.

Community Singing
A community singing will be held Friday night at the Washington Methodist church at Washington. All outstanding singers and quartets will be given a part in the program. The public is invited.

The 300th anniversary of the establishment of secondary schools in this country occurs this year.

stance, the annual number of deaths from auto accidents has soared from nearly 28,000 to the 36,000 figure.

One other major factor in holiday tragedy during through the years has been drowning. While the automobile was gradually pushing fireworks out of the grim picture, water more or less consistently was claiming its share of Independence Day victims.

However completely the auto has usurped the firecracker's tragic Independence Day role is shown in this table:

Year	Fireworks	Automobiles	Drownings	Other Causes	Total
1928	11	54	106	34	205
1929	7	70	71	11	159
1930	12	81	57	28	178
1931	6	161	151	43	361
1932	10	117	90	26	243
1933	7	82	58	38	183
1934	2	69	70	34	175

Nothing could be more eloquent than these figures in revealing how Uncle Sam has conquered one great menace of the Fourth.

Nor could anything reveal more clearly the necessity of greater caution in driving and bathing, if America's long-time campaign for a "safe and sane" Fourth is to erase tragedy from an otherwise joyous holiday.

Father Chained Her as 'Unruly'

Chained by her father, 9-year-old Stella Miko is pictured here as authorities found her, victim of startling parental brutality. The father, Jacob Miko, farmer, living near Uniontown, Pa., imprisoned Stella and three more of his children because they were "unruly." Miko was sentenced to pay $200 fine or spend 350 days in jail.

Building Revival

it must come from one or all of three sources:

1. Replacement in industry. Factories have been wearing out their machines. Even machines standing still grow old and worthless. There must be new factories in need of new machinery. The moment must come when obsolescence must be repaired. Has that time come yet?

2. Under the NRA many industries made it difficult for manufacturers to

Summing Up
Here is a brief summary of John T. Flynn's views of the business situation in mid-year 1935, as this famous journalist-economist has given them in three daily articles (concluding today):

1. Business was declining during the last six months as against a rise in the same six months last year.

2. But its total product was larger than in the first half of 1934.

3. Business seems to have enough energy to move up and down around a point of 70 per cent of normal, but cannot seem to move for any length of time above that level.

4. To make this additional lift it seems to need some new energy.

5. The lift it now enjoys comes from government spending, and—

6. The new lift must come from a revival of the capital goods industry—the chief hope of which is housing and factory replacement.

7. Business in the next six months should be better than in the last six months because government spending will be resumed on a larger scale, and—

8. As a result of such spending of borrowed funds we are in the incipient stages of a mild inflation which can be checked only by a shift from borrowing to taxation, the sentiment for which is growing.

Thus stand the books.

buy new machinery. This was part of the plan to restrict production. That is past. Perhaps it will release some machinery-buying energy.

The other source of borrowing may be real estate. The new banking bill, so bitterly fought by Senator Gass, has a provision permitting national banks to lend up to 75 per cent of the value of property on 20 year terms amortized. This has been included at the request of the smaller banks. It may make money easier for house and store rehabilitation and new construction. I think the provision is a very mischievous one. But that is not the point here. Its effect may be to start a little flow of credit.

A more powerful force for credit may be seen in the construction industry, but not, I fear, for the immediate future. It is not likely to develop in any effective way until next summer and even later. I believe a housing shortage is in course of development. It has not become acute yet. But it will presently be felt.

Worn Out Houses Need Replacement
During these last five depression seasons, houses have been wearing out. We knock down thousands of homes every year for one reason or another. Scores of thousands have been burned down. Thousands more have been abandoned because they were finally at the end of the trail. Meantime we have not been replacing them. In many communities we have been destroying more houses than we have been building.

All this while people have been getting born. New families have been

Reece Is Returned to Tennessee Jail

Convicted State Official Seized in Tourist Camp in Florida

TAMPA, Fla.—(AP)—Tennessee sent to Tampa Tuesday for Joseph L. Reece, whose conviction on theft charges the Supreme Court of that state affirmed Tuesday.

Arrested at a tourist camp near here, the prisoner at first denied that he was Reece. Tuesday, however, Matt C. Beasley, assistant chief of detectives, said the man told him and other detectives that his name is Reece and he is the missing Tennessee official.

formed by marriage—faster than old have been broken up. In the next ten years we will have to build 10,000,000 houses just to take care of population increase and replacement, to say nothing of enabling people to keep up with the Jones and the Smiths who keep inventing new things for houses. This housing market will develop. If left to itself, it may take some time. It will develop rapidly if some impetus can be given to business from some other quarter.

At the same time it may be that a new industry is in sight. This is the developing house industry. This is developing with a rapidly little burst by the general public. It may burst on us at any moment. However, these things, as already pointed out, will not make much difference in business in the next six months.

Government Outlay to Be Increased
What will make a difference will be government spending. Spending in the first half of 1935 was much less than in the first half of 1934. This situation will probably change in the coming six months and, doubtless, throughout next year.

This important fact must be kept in mind. The President recently obtained by congressional appropriation $4,400,000,000 for a great relief and public works campaign. Up to now practically none of this money has been spent. In fact the President has left from last year's appropriations and still unspent at least a billion dollars—perhaps more. He has, therefore, very nearly six billion dollars which he can spend before the end of June, 1935, if he sees fit. As this is twice as much almost as he has spent on emergency purposes in either of his two years thus far it will be seen that he is powerfully armed to give to business via the government spending route whatever shot is necessary to keep it moving.

The government has been making some effort to change over from a relief program to a works program. This has delayed an extensive outlay under the new plan. But we may assume that it will be in full working order by fall. If it is, it will be sure to fatten business somewhat.

House May Rebel Against Borrowing.
The question of inflation is to be reckoned with. I do not believe we will have greenback inflation—or printing press money. But we will have credit inflation—inflation flowing from government borrowing. Indeed that has already begun. It can be checked only by checking government borrowing now and resorting to a program of taxation. Sentiment for taxation to meet government outlays, whatever they are, has been growing in both houses of Congress. I will venture a little prediction. If the President himself does not act with decision, one of these days there will be a real blow-off in the House—a real revolt in that apparently complacent body of yes-men—and it will be on the question of government borrowing. If this comes the inflationary movement will be checked. But if it does not come, nothing else can stop inflation.

But it will not be mad, wild inflation like the German, or, for that matter, perhaps, even the French article. But it will be sufficient to increase prices materially beyond what they are today. Every man who has funds under his arm or to invest must seriously ask himself and settle what he will do in the event this inflation proceeds further.

Elections Serve as Business Spur
Beyond all of course, affecting the current scene, will be the elections. The presidential election will not be held until November, 1936—16 months away. But the conventions will be in full blast a year from now. And long before that, primary elections for the selection of delegates will be under way. And before that campaign for such primary elections and the moves of the candidates will be occupying our front pages.

Then you will hear the usual crank-or who will begin to lament "this quadrennial disturbance to business just as things promise to be better."

One of the falsest of old fictions is that elections always hurt business. History refutes the notion. Business has actually improved during campaigns years oftener than it has declined. Even recent history is against the fiction. In 1934 from September right through the congressional elections business had the soundest increase it has had since the New Deal. And strangely enough, in the bitter contest of 1932, when things were so bad, all through August, September, October and November business activity was on the rise.

Ozan-St. Paul. The Ozan-St. Paul Home Demonstration Club held its regular meeting Friday, June 21, at the home of Mrs. Chloa City. The meeting was called to order by the president. Opening song, Tramp, Tramp, Tramp. Lord's prayer in union. The roll call was answered by 25 members, after which the minutes were read and approved. The president then appointed a committee on arrangements to make the trip to Guernsey July 3.

Miss Griffin asked the club to take the churning kitchen as its goal for the year's work.

The members voted to have a fair this fall.

The following reports were read: Food preservation, food preparation, clothing, gardening, art craft, poultry. After these reports were heard the members were entertained with games by our recreational leaders. We were then invited to the kitchen where Miss Griffin gave a demonstration in vegetable salad making. The salad being served to the members with an iced drink. Both were delicious.

The next meeting will be with Mrs. Floyd Matthews. The demonstration will be landscaping and bottoming chairs. All members are urged to be present as this meeting will determine the side to be entertained.
